School has opened again with a flourish. Thirty-nine students there are altogether in the first year, 30 girls and 9 boys. This with 26 each in the second and third years, makes a grand total of 90, 63 girls and 27 men, in the School. Not bad for the beginning of the fourth year, especially with so many of the men who might be taking the course, in the Services. Figures are often very dry, but we think you will be interested to know that 78 of the students come from Ontario and 42 of the 78 from Toronto.

Of the other provinces, there are only 2 from Nova Scotia, 2 from Manitoba, 1 from Alberta, 4 from British Columbia and 3 from outside Canada. We still think the graduates are our best advertisers and so we ask you, especially those of you who are outside Ontario, to speak a word for the new course. Don't forget.

September 25th, 27th and 28th were registration days, with Tuesday, the 28th, the special day for the first year students. Before that date, letters of welcome were sent to the new students from T. Stewart Scott, president of the Physical and Health Education Association, inviting them to gather at 415 Yonge Street on Tuesday morning to meet the upper classmen who would help them with registration and look after them generally. Coffee and doughnuts were served and after registration in the course and later in the classes, each senior took his or her freshie out to lunch. Two-thirty saw everyone gathered in front of University College to begin a tour of the campus. Later in the afternoon the freshies with their seniors were guests of University College for tea at the Union and in the evening there was a party at 415 Yonge Street. Quite a day! We do not know who were the more tired, the freshies who were being shown or the seniors who were their "personal conductors". The party at night was lots of fun, but ended in tragedy(?) when someone leaned against the collapsable table on which were bottles of chocolate milk, cups of coffee etc. Crash! One end of the table suddenly collapsed--the rest is left to your imagination, but you will be glad to know that the breakage was small.

A book might be written on the trials and tribulations of looking for a residence. Most of you know that 99 St. George Street is now a blood donors' clinic of the Red Cross. Walk down St. George Street the next time you are in that vicinity and you will be surprised at the changes, - the signs, parking space, etc. The University authorities had the worry of looking for a new residence, we had the worry of waiting and wondering. Finally all negotiations for residences that would hold all our out-of-town students fell through and we had to find various places for them. There are 12 students at 30 Admiral Road, 5 at 230 St. George St., 4 at 415 Bloor St. W., and 5 at Willcocks House, now a university residence. Not an ideal situation by any means but better than nothing.

Everyone says camp was grand this year. In the city we were all feeling very sorry for the people at camp because it was so wet and cold. But evidently the sun smiled on Tanakoon and all was well. Of course it was cold in spots, but who minds the cold when she has a ski suit and long woolies and a sleeping bag? The numbers still were small this year, 19 campers in all, but we expect a big jump ahead next year with 19 enthusiastic fans "rooting" for the September Camp Course.

"Dancing for Fun" is the name of the book Dorothy Jackson has put out lately in wire-bound mimeographed form. The dances are all set to music that is easy to obtain and the book is being well received. It may be bought from the School Office, 415 Yonge St. or from the National Council of the Y.W.C.A. Price 50 cents.

ABOUT WARTIME DAY NURSERIES

By Ethel Stevens '30

NOTES:

The new Dominion-Provincial Wartime Day Nurseries are now making their way into many persons' thoughts, whether or not they have children concerned. No doubt a great many of you are interested in them too, some from the parent's point of view, and others of you from the physical educationists point of view, but all concerned with the educational angle.

I started my training last Fall, in the Institute of Child Study, University of Toronto. The course was a fairly short one, as a great need had suddenly arisen for trained Nursery School workers. The demand far exceeded the supply. On the completion of the course, I had a month's apprenticeship in Bellevue Avenue nursery, which is Unit No. 1 in Ontario. I was thrilled when I was given the post of supervisor for Dentonia Park Day Nursery, on Dawes Road, Toronto. It was a new project at that time, February, and eventually became Unit No. 7. I had a great deal of the buying to do, to equip the place, although the work was made reasonably light by means of a "buying list". Choosing the colour scheme was rather fun. We finally settled on a light heliotrope blue for walls and furniture, which would blend with the scarlet chairs, loaned by the church, in which the nursery was set up. We opened on March 15th, with three children. Our maximum enrolment was to be 50, and we were not long in raising our number to 47. However, before we reached our quota, I was given the opportunity to go on the staff at Bellevue Ave., the government training and demonstration centre. I am in charge of the senior division there, and loving it. It is the most thrilling work that you could imagine. I have never been given such a challenge as this work gives me.

The children range from 2 years to school age. To some of you that may seem like "just so many babies", but you should come in to see our Junior School (2-3½ years) and our Senior School (3-5 years) to see just where the difference lies. The babies as we usually term them, are as cute as can be found anywhere. They come in all shapes, sizes and colours, I might use the term "assorted", but no one more lovable than another. The junior division naturally demands a great deal of adult supervision in its minor details - wet clothing and beds, spills and tumbles - but these really are minor details when you know the effort and skill that is being put forth to teach these babies cleanliness, independence, happiness and achievement through routine and play. Naturally their skills are few, and a great deal of assistance must be given, but it is a great thrill to see them begin to wash themselves unaided, eat a meal and carry their dishes without a spill, remove their shoes and climb into bed. On the other hand, the baby is learning to play with other children, to play alone and not interfere with others. He soon learns that crying and scenes of any kind are of no avail.

Let that "baby" graduate to a senior, and you must realize that he certainly is no longer a baby but a thriving individualist. His skills in general routines, washing, eating, sleeping, are fairly well advanced, and most of his difficulties come with social encounters with others.

The nurseries themselves are fairly well on a par. Some have 2 floors, separating the juniors from seniors, others have but one. But I think on the whole the juniors and seniors have separate playrooms and separate sleeping rooms. The Playrooms are bright and cheery, with light painted walls and furniture. They are equipped with the correct sized tables and chairs for such miniature people. The walls have a certain space given over to shelves which contain all the play equipment. Each toy is kept in a box which may be taken for use at any time, provided the child has already replaced the one with which he has finished. The toys are numerous: educational toys of all kinds, pasting, painting, cutting, too many to give in detail. You would probably like to know that a great many of these have been made by the volunteers throughout
